Sewage Damage Services

Sewage overflows and back-ups can happen anytime and can be very disruptive and damaging to your home or work environment. Sewage is considered to be a bio-hazard, so proper protection and cleanup techniques are required to return your home or building to a usable and safe environment. Many people attempt the cleanup themselves, but we strongly discourage doing this sort of cleaning yourself due to the risk of exposure to not only germs and bacteria, but to blood-borne pathogens, sharps and other hazardous materials and chemicals. People often discover that their cleanup efforts were incomplete, and that moisture has seeped into the walls, under baseboards, or into cabinets and is now becoming a mold problem.

The method for restoring a loss that has occurred due to a sewage backflow is much different than a fresh water situation. Black Water (sewage, or old gray and fresh water) restoration projects require special handling. RESTORx follows the IICRC S 500 Standard and Reference Guide for Professional Water Damage Restoration.

Some examples of what would be considered a Sewage Backflow are:

- | | |
|---|---------------------------------|
| Toilet Backflow (beyond trap) | Septic Tank Backflows |
| Sump Pump Failures | Floor Drain Backups |
| Flooding of Sea Water | Ground Surface Water |
| Sewage Pipe Break | Sink of Bathtub Overflow |
| Rising Water from Rivers/Streams | |

If allowed to go unchecked, a small problem can become a big and expensive one later. RESTORx personnel are specially trained and have the proper equipment to not only clean the area, but to dry it completely to prevent ongoing damage. RESTORx has the cleaning facilities to restore contaminated items to a like-new condition. Cleanup should begin as soon as possible to reduce risk of exposure to sewage.
