Fire Damage Restoration

Fire damage restoration is difficult, because firefighting can contribute to water damage. RESTORx takes care to insure that contents are restored properly to prevent mold growth. If not charred, many items can be restored. Even a light coating of soot could be permanently embedded in items if professional restoration techniques are not used. Call us immediately! RESTORx technicians are extensively trained to handle all types of disasters. Items that can generally be restored are: carpeting, furniture, clothing, china, silver, antiques, heirlooms, appliances, electronics, and photographs.

Q. We had a minor fire. Several walls are covered with smoke. Can't I just wipe them down?

A. Depending on what burned, you may be doing the walls more harm by cleaning them. Fires leave residues of acids, synthetics, PVC pipe, and wood treatments. It's cheaper to call RESTORx than to repaint. The smoke residue can also pit the metals in your house. You want an expert to inspect and let you know what your options are.

Q. We had a major fire. There is water and ash everywhere. Is our furniture ruined?

A. In many cases, RESTORx can restore your furniture as long as the smoke and ash were not driven by heat.

Full Contents Packing & Storage Facility

In many instances contents will need to be physically removed from fire or smoke damaged premises. This may be necessary due to corrosive aftereffects of a fire, or due to the need to extensively repair the damaged structure. RESTORx has the experience and capability to remove, clean, store and return contents in an organized and professional manner. Our contents warehouse is heated, secure, and security monitored. We also employ specialty restoration vendors for items such as fine art, jewelry, pianos and organs, guns, furs, dolls and many other valuable items.
